

MARY BOYLE O'REILLY TELLS WHY A CANNERY
BOY SAID "THERE IS NO GOD"

THE DAY BOOK

500 SO. PEORIA ST.

398

TEL. MONROE 353

VOL. 2, NO. 50 Chicago, Monday, Nov. 25, 1912 ONE CENT

LUCILLE CAMERON, FREED, SAYS LIFE IS A NIGHTMARE; JOHNSONS DENOUNCE HER

"I never want to hear Jack Johnson's name again. He ruined my past, and the memory of him will ruin my future.

"There are times when I waken up in the night and seem to see his black, hideous body towering over me, threatening me with awful things, and jeering at me.

"The face is always grinning, always taunting. It seems to be saying to me:

"You are a white woman, but I got you. I did with you as I wanted. I used you, and then I cast you aside to be the shame of all the men of your own race."

"I never can forget. The past will always haunt me. Jack Johnson will always haunt me. Only on my dying day will I know peace."—Lucille Cameron.

"What the Cameron women say is outrageous. The mother knew the life her daughter was leading before she ever heard of Jack. To the daughter, Jack was only a man whose money she wanted, and she was eager to become his mistress to get it.

"All the stories against Jack are lies. The whole secret is that Jack has lots of money and that he wasn't handing it out fast enough to please some people."—Mrs. Tina Johnson, mother of Jack Johnson.

Lucille Cameron, the 19-year-old girl who caused the indictment of Jack Johnson for white slavery, was freed today.

Standing in a corridor of the federal building with her face half buried in her mother's breast, she gave her first interview, since the indictment of Johnson, to The Day Book.

It was the interview of a broken woman for whom life held nothing worth while, a woman haunted by the past and afraid, terribly afraid, of the future.

And even as Lucille Cameron was sobbing out the horror of her life, Jack Johnson's mother was branding her as a woman of the street who had been glad to sell herself to Jack for money.

The Cameron girl has been held in jail under $25,000 bonds as a witness against Johnson ever since her relations with him were exposed by the government.

Her mother, Mrs. Falconet Cameron, has been staying in jail